

The Centre for Feminist Research (CFR) and The Department of Social Science present:

International Symposium

“Migration, Sex Work, Trafficking: Master Narratives and Critical Perspectives”

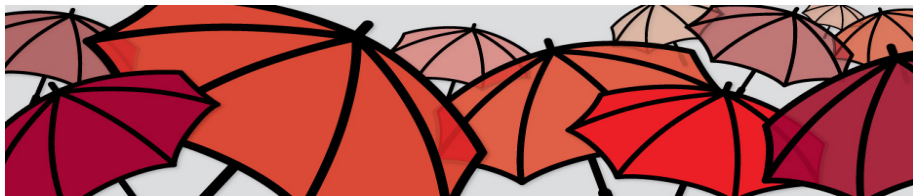

From new research in Europe, North America and Africa, this symposium critically examines key narratives about the cross-border movement of persons for work in sex industries, and explores alternative ways of thinking about “sex trafficking.” The panels showcase graduate student research in the field and highlight new directions in the debate.

Thursday, March 24th 2011

10:00am - 3:30pm

Harry Crowe Room (109 Atkinson)

York University

Keynote speaker:

Dr. Rutvica Andrijasevic (Open University, UK)
“Sex, Slaves and Citizens: the Politics of Mobility in Europe”

Panelists:

Elya M. Durisin (PhD candidate Political Science, York University)

Amanda Glasbeek (Assistant professor, Criminology, Department of Social Science, York University)

Synnøve Økland Jahnsen (PhD candidate Sociology, University of Bergen, Norway)

Sine Plambech (PhD candidate Social Anthropology, Danish Institute for International Studies (DIIS)/Columbia University, New York)

Karlee Sapoznik (PhD candidate History, Harriet Tubman Institute, York University)

Jessica Yee (Native Youth Sexual Health Network)

To register for lunch and/or to receive copies of symposium materials, please e-mail tlo_919@yahoo.ca by March 22nd

The generous support of the following is gratefully acknowledged: Dean of Research; Faculty of Liberal Arts and Professional Studies; Department of Social Science; Law and Society Program and the Faculty of Graduate Studies.